Communications Officer

“Girls Count”

Are you hungry for Justice & Equality? Do you wish to bring Justice & Equality for those who are marginalised in society? If yes, then meet Garima Kaur, who is the programme officer of “Girls Count” – an initiative in response to Declining Child Sex Ratio by the National Foundation for India (NFI) supported by United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) and UN Women. Girls Count campaigns on challenging Patriarchy and effective implementation of PCPNDT Act through collaboration with the Govt., public and policy advocacy, research, networking and civil society engagement. Learn about the work of Girls Count from Garima and her colleague, Kashishi Badar, Communications Office at Girls Count, currently heading a campaign called HerShare, which seeks to strengthen property rights and financial independence of women and girls.
